Hello! I've become convinced that my ability to help others is limited by my knowledge of resources in our community. I know my personal resources are not enough to help the people that come across my path; my church's resources are not enough, either, to help everyone. But I can help some, my church can help more, and together as an entire community, I believe we can help everyone—if we work together. It takes a village—a community who realizes the importance and power of working together across agency lines, church walls, and denominational divides. But, truth is, agencies can't handle the numbers of people applying for help with the kind of time, energy, and compassion-reserves needed for each case—and often they're limited by lacking resources. They need partners—donors, volunteers, listening ears—to help them. Ultimately, it takes individuals being willing to educate themselves so that they can become the change they wish to see in their community for those in need.

Thanks for coming to this resource fair to do just that. It does my heart such good to see the community coming together in this way...

Please stop by the “Agency Forum Area,” located in the lobby, to hear agencies talk about community needs, the work they’re doing, & the assistance they need:
